The expression "wages" means income of every kind from employment, however calculated, including overtime, bonus, etc.

The amount of income on which the tax is payable may, however, be reduced by certain allowances and deductions.

The deductions that can be claimed from the gross amount of income are as follow:

(a) Abatements.

An abatement of £120 may be claimed when the income from all sources exceeds £130 but does not exceed £400 a year.

An abatement of £100 may be claimed when the income from all sources exceeds £400 but does not exceed £600 a year.

Abatements are allowed for wife, children or dependent relative.

An abatement of £70 may be claimed when the income from all sources exceeds £600 but does not exceed £700 a year.

(d) A deduction for sums paid for insurance on the life of a taxpayer or his wife.

(e) A deduction for so much of any contributions to a trade union as is allocated to superannuation or death benefits, and for similar contributions to a friendly society.

(f) A deduction for any payments on account of tools, explosives, and similar expenses incurred exclusively for the purposes of the employment.

Sick pay and unemployment pay, received from a trade union, friendly society, or under the Workmen's Compensation Act or the National Health Insurance Act, are not taxable.

Dividends received on purchases from co-operative societies are not taxable, and should not be included in a return made for income tax purposes.

FARMERS' INCOME TAX.

A farmer whose total Poor Law Valuation does not exceed £65, and who has no beneficial interest in his farm, such as Fee Simple nor other source of income, is exempt from paying Income Tax.

A farmer whose total income from all sources, including his wife's income (if any), does not exceed £130 per annum will not be liable for assessment under any schedule, and if he has a wife, and (say) two children under 16 years of age, no Income Tax will be payable unless his total income exceeds £195.

Leases

CALENDAR OF FAIRS OF MUNSTER FOR 1920.

To ensure the greatest possible accuracy, application is annually made by letter to the secretaries or proprietors of all the Fairs published as held in Munster. For the district it covers it may therefore be relied on as an authentic list. Subscribers anxious to see the names and dates of their local fairs properly inserted are requested to furnish information to the publishers from time to time.

Fairs held on dates of the month which fall on Sunday are sometimes held on the preceding Saturday and at other times (and chiefly so) on the following Monday. Local inquiry is often desirable.

JANUARY.

The letter "A" after name of place is a contraction for FIG FAIR; "H" for HORSE FAIR; "C" for CATTLE FAIR; "S" for SHEEP FAIR.

JOURNAL OF THE CORK HISTORICAL AND ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

An Antiquarian and Historical Record of the Province of Munster. Twenty-eight yearly volumes of the Journal have already been issued, containing a vast amount of information not hitherto published. The Cork Historical and Archæological Society, originally founded in 1892 for the City and County of Cork, was subsequently extended to the whole Province of Munster. Impartial attention is given to all contributed Papers of Antiquarian and Historical interest, together with topographical, chronological, genealogical and folk-lore notes, etc. In lieu of scarce books, transcriptions of ancient records and original manuscripts, that could be made use of for publication, would be acceptable. Care would be taken of all originals.

The Council also solicit information of any Antiquarian Remains in the district not already recorded. Excursions of investigation from time to time, to which all members are invited. All communications to be addressed to the Hon. Secretary, H. & A. Society, 70 Patrick Street, Cork.

The Annual Subscription is 7s. 6d., payable in advance, which includes the Journal of the Society (published by Guy & Co. Ltd., Cork), free to any part of the world. The Society is open to all who take an interest in its objects.
